Kentucky Prosperous. ite special letter to the New Orlen

It has been about twenty years since I have had an opportunity to observe carefully the farms of Kentucky and their products, and although my present observations have extended only to portions of Fnyette, Mercer, Jessamine, and Boyle counties, I can testify knowingly to a very marked improvement in most respects. Kentucky has assuredly been growing wealthy, and I am glad to see that a large share of this increase in wealth is in the ferm of substantial improvements to huildings, walls, rouds, fences, and stock. The gains of the farmer have not been carried away but have been left on been carried away but have been left of the land in a permanent form for the benefit of the children who are to become

The distinction we make is this They lost their rights by the crimes they committed, while they did not get rid of their obligations. They had rights, as a part of this Government, as States in this Union. They had obligations as citizens of the United States. Let me give you an example familiar to our courts: A man commits murder; at that moment he has all the high rights of a citizen—the right to the ballot, the right to be elected to office, the right to the marriage relation, the right to the government of his children, the right to walk a freeman around the streets, but by the act of murder, by that reets, but by the act of murder, by nis wife, to his children, and even to itself. Mark me, he gets rid of none of his obligations to society by his own orime. [Applanse.] So with these States, while they could not make one hair white or black so far as their disseverance from the Union was concerned, yet they by their treason and their crimes could forfeit all their rights in the Union not less traitors because they were eitizens—not less citizens because they were traitors. (Applanse.) Now, then, what is a State for? It is said that a State can never die. Suppose for a moment that all the people in a State die, what becomes of the State then? [Laughter] Suppose all the people more out of what becomes of the State then ' [Laugh-ter.] Suppose all the people move out of a State—I now speak of the political or-ganization as a part of this great Govern-ment—what becomes of the State then? Suppose, one step further, that all the people of a State substantially, with a few glorious exceptions whom we need not now step to consider, suppose they all re-pudiated their obligations to this Govern-ment, and all bound themselves together and swore allegiance to another govern-ment, and all united in arms to drive out he organ of civil government.

I do not know, my frieuds, that it will I do not know, my frieuds, that it will make the argument any stronger to quote an authority to you, especially such an authority, but Andrew Johnson, in his procelamation appointing Provisional Governors, says that he appoints Provisional Governors because all civil government is destroyed in the revolted States. With all civil government destroyed, using his very language, where was the State? Therefore, the idea that a State can never die. idea that a State can never di that a State must always exist, and that a State by its people can fight the Union for four years, and then come back of its own volition and undertake to govern the Union, is a sophism and a delusion nn-worthy of an enlightened people. [Ap-plause] Now, then, it is said further that State cannot die, and cannot lose ights, because it has no right to secede. Let us look at that a little further and a man here on the sidewalk weltering in his blood, his throat cut, and the bloody razor ri his hand, showing a case of sui-cide. Why, I say, the man is dead. No, say you, he cannot be dead, he has no right to cut his throat. But is a question of right not a question of fact? To that answer, this is a question of fact, and ot a question of right; and I repeat once nore what I understand to be the true wrinciples of the great Republican party in this question, that in this great contest not one right of the Gove these States or over their citizens was lost,

This is perhaps as ingenious and plausible a statement of the Radical position as can be made; yet, so far as intelligent

For the Successful Trealment of ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS

A few weeks since I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill for a trouble some asthma and bronchial affection, un der which I labored for a long time. The result of his treatment has been so truly astonishing and unmistakably beneficial that, in justice to the Doctor, as well as for the benefit of those similarly affected. I give publicity to the facts of my ease. When I applied to Dr. Lighth'll I suffered very much from Asthma. My chest wa ppressed and my breathing labored. coughed severely, expectorated a great deal, was troubled with night sweats, and had my rest frequently disturbed by diffi-cult breathing. From thevery first application my symptoms mended, my cough diminished, the night sweats disappeared, the expectoration lessened, and the Asth ma was relieved so that I am now on more able to breathe freely, and feel as The prempt relief I obtained, and the re

To the Editor of the N. Y. Herald; Some two weeks since I obtained a copy of the New York Herald of Sept. 2, containing an account of the digging up of Capt Kidd's treasure, also of a man who had been a sailor, and had given some account of the place where this money was buried. The article in the Herald stated that a commany had at various periods. that a company had at various periods been digging on Oak Island, north of Bos-on, for the concealed treasure. I wish to on, for the concealed treasure. I wish to now where Oak Island is, for Kidd s mon-y never was there, and I think it proba-ile that I know more about its history than would sometimes leave him and remain absent two or three days. He always returned with his pockets full, and furnished his keeper with money as long as he lived. Before his death he told his friend that he would give him the cheat that Kidd had buried, for all the pirates were dead. He then related all the ciramstances connected with it, where and how to find it; the place to atart from, with the points of the compass, the corrse, and the exact distance in chains and links, money in bags, silver and gold, and poured it into the chest until it was full. They then shut down the lid, turned the tarpau-lin over it, and porred over all a harrel of tar, covering it up with earth to the depth of four or five feet. My father was Fundy, on the east shore of Nova Scotia.

the place Lowe had described, and und it exactly as he had stated it to be. ard they told him they were searching for noney of Kidd's. He swore he would shoot any man who dug on his land for the treasure, and they were therefore compelled to relinquish their object. No part of their knowledge of the secret was part of their knowledge of the secret was confided to this man.

Son after this period the war of the revolution broke out, and this party never made any forther attempts to find the hidden wealth, nor did those who had remained behind when the first expedition set out. My father sold his property and received continental money in payment. This because worthless, and he lost all, and shortly afterwards removed to Ballston, Saratoga county, N. Y. He was at this time about 40 years of age. At Ballston he purchased a farm, lying between the cast line of Ballston and the little lake. He lived there about twenty years, and it took him the greater part of that time to pay for his farm, he having purchased it on credit; consequently he was trashic to make another attempt to secure chased it on credit; consequently he was tradic to make another attempt to seenre the buried prize. In 1785 I was added to he a ready large family, and about the time his land was paid for he had become security in a business transaction for a merchant named Sherman. Sherman failed and it took all my father a property, including the farm, to cancel his debt. This effectually quenched any hopes my father might have had, of returning to look for Kidd's money. He then moved to the town of Seneca. Ontario county, and lived merchant tamed Sherman is aled and it took all my father's property, including the farm, to cancel his debt. Thus effectually quenched any hopes my father might have had, of returning to look for Kidd's money. He then moved to the town of Sensea. Ontario county, and lived there usual he had paid for a farm of about sixty acres. He died in 1829, at the age of eighty-nine years. He had often told me concerning this wealth when I was about sixteen or eighteen years of age, and I had often thought of going to search for it, but could find no one to accompany me, and had forgottenall about until I saw this account in the Herald, when it all recarred afreeh to my memory. I honestly believe that the money is there, and if the names of places are not altered I am certain that, with the aid of a compass and the interview of the property. in I could quickly find it. To do this could like to ascertain the names of all islands and headlands to the lay of

I should lke to ascertain the names of all the islands and headlands to the llay of Fundy, on the Nova Scotia side. I have never told any one the place to start from nor the course to be taken, nor the distance, that I remember. I am now eighty one years of age, well and hearty, theugh somewhat lame.

It I knew all the names of the islands and headlands on both shores of the Bay of Fundy as they were named 100 years ago, it would not take me long to find the place and dig it up. I do not know but that it is rather late in the season to attempt it this year, but if I live I think I shall start next spring, but I shall not go alone. Your paper states that about $100.000 has been spent already in the search. There is almost a wagon load of treamre, silver, and gold together, and if you like yon can have a chance in. If you find me the names of all the islands, de., I can find the name of the one I want. The leg elephant attach dato Dan. Rice's circus, that exhibited at Utica last Saturday, concluded to go on a raid last night. His keeper had contined him in the tent on the commons, back of the reservoir, for the night, and then, thinking his charge would behave, went to his hotel. In the middle of the night the police at the station-house were aroused by a man ru hing in, so excited that he could hardly speak. He declared that the wild leasts had roken loose, and that the wild leasts had roken loose, and that the chizens of that be ality were freeing wildly for their lives, and that he had barely escaped to till the tale!

The driver of his elephantship was aroused, and on proceeding to the scene of action, the elephant was found in a garden, corner of Steuhen and Engle streets, quietly nunching callings, turnips, and other garden sass. Somebody who watched his motions, says fences were no protection at all. He would quietly pick up a length of fence and lay it one side, and then "lay into" the coveted cablages. In a short time the cont m's of three gardens had been disposed of, and he was looking about for more provisiona when the keeper arrived and relieved the anxiety of the inhabitants of that local tr.
